

MAP, N^o 4

Showing continuation of Fort Smith and Santa Fe Route from Tucumcari Creek to Santa Fe.

BY
1st. Lieut. J.H. SIMPSON, Corps Top^l Eng^{rs}
1849.

Note. The Figures from 57 to 64 denote the several camps. The road taken by Emigrants via Ojo Vernal and San Miguel, rougher than Cañon Blanco and Galisteo route, but probably shorter and better watered. Pasturage an alternation of buffalo and mesquite grass beyond Tucumcari Creek rather scant; a search for better generally rewarded. Wood abundant except at Galisteo. Water sometimes abundant, always sufficient. Exploration & survey terminated at Santa Fe, June 24th 1849.

P. S. Journal's Lith. Steam Press Phil^a

Table of Distances from Fort Smith.

To Camp N ^o 57	650 miles
58	675
59	693
60	706
61	737
62	761
63	795
64	804
Santa Fe	819½

Next days travel might be shortened by camping on the Gallinas, if so, wood to be got along the road same day.
Next camp on Galisteo should be near verge of table land, just opposite Cucuta: mules should be driven down steep declivity to Rio Pecos to water.
By encamping opposite Cucuta, the next halt should be ½ mile west of fork of Albuquerque and Galisteo roads.
Should the road we took to S^o Fe be taken, water may be found at junction of S^o Miguel road, 31 miles from Galisteo. Wood should be picked up on the road for camp at Galisteo.

Rare-Map
G 4321
.P25
1849
S5